

PLEASANT HOPE--1889

This is a thriving village in Mooney Township in southeastern corner of county, fourteen miles from Bolivar, Its boundaries are somewhat uncertain, and it's estimated to have a population of about 300.

MERCANTILE AND INDUSTRIAL HISTORY

Messrs. Smith and Hedden opened the first general store in 1851. In 1853, Smith and Kerr built the first business house in the place. Neil McKenzie, who began in 1854, kept a store here a short time.

J. A. Cowden and Bro. were merchandising in 1855-61. From a date soon after the close of war, McClure & Co. had a store here for some years. Beginning after the war Massey and Patterson traded until 1867, when Mr. Patterson died and was succeeded by his father, and the firm continued unchanged in name for some years. C. B. Holland was merchant in 1870-71; Emery Spencer, 1871-77; W. A. Wilcox, 1877-82. Kirby and Colwell, 1885, until succeeded by Harvey G. Colwell, who in 1877, sold out to Wilcox, Wilson and Co. whose store was burned in January, 1888. Firth and Wilkinson established a store in 1884 which has since been under the management of R. G. Wilkinson. The village now contains one general store, an implement and grocery store, a drug store, a blacksmith shop, and a wagon-maker shop, a flouring mill was built in 1882 and now owned by Sallee and Cowden, with a carding mill attached. This latter establishment was enlarged in 1882 and is one of the best roller-process mills in Southwest Missouri.

HIGH SCHOOL

In 1849 there was built at Pleasant Hope the building of the Pleasant Hope Academy. The work was supervised by Rev. R. D. Smith. The first school was taught by Miss A.E. Sawyer, from Vermont. Rev. Mr. Smith was manager. Miss Sawyer remained two years, and was succeeded by Miss F. M. Waite, and she by Miss Nelson, both from the east. The school ceased to exist about 1855.

In 1869, Rev. Aaron Grisley (or Grisby) taught a high school here four months, and was succeeded by A. C. Lemmon, who was the last high school teacher under that revival.

PLEASANT HOPE NORMAL ACADEMY—In the spring of 1833, Prof. W. I. Davis of Illinois, opened a high school here, in the public building, the old academy being no longer fit for occupancy. In the year a company was organized to establish a permanent school. The members were: E. M. Cowan, J. P. Fullerton, W. P. Patterson, Z. T. L. Buns, R. W. Fullerton, J. P. Cowan, W. M. Fullerton, J.
